Please see your reply attached. We basically need a written document signed by someone that explains what is wrong with us so that they can evaluate us. We have approached so many evaluators that we know how they work. They even decide on what background information they need to delve into and what kind of instruments they need to use based on that initial input.

I replied to that email. I will repeat my response: you need only tell the evaluator that the court has recommended a full psychological evaluation for each parent. If the evaluator has questions he or she may contact me directly once you have signed a release.

D■■■■'s evaluation is ongoing. We had a session yesterday and we got the next one scheduled for February, 7.

Regarding our evaluation, Xiaolei sent you an email earlier. She received a response from you regarding D■■■■'s evaluation, but has not heard from you regarding our evaluation. We basically need a reason/concern to be evaluated. We need to state that reason/concern clearly to make an appointment. It is a bit like biopsy: they cannot just get a piece from every organ in your body and fish for cancer. They need to know what/where to look at.

I cc'd Xiaolei on this email so that she can remind you of that email.

Please advise as to the status of Denis's psychological evaluation. I am also interested in knowing the status of your and your wife's evaluations. Thank you.
